

Residence Life Behavioral Standards

The University Community Standards of this handbook governs the facets of student behavior that are applicable to all students. The behavioral standards outlined under that section also contain the Student Code of Conduct, which supersedes any of the behavioral standards listed in the Residence Life section or any other University publication.

Saint Peter's University, through the Office of Residence Life, expects resident students to also abide by those standards that are unique to a communal, residential environment. The offenses listed below are in direct violation of those standards. Any of these violations, or the aiding, abetting, inciting, encouraging, or supporting of any of these violations, or any other conduct that disrupts the communal residential environment of the residence facilities, constitutes an offense for which students may be subject to judicial sanctions set forth by the Office of Residence Life and/or the Dean of Students.

Residence Life Community Standards

Saint Peter's University, through the Office of Residence Life, expects resident students to abide by Community Standards that are unique to living in a communal, residential environment. We rely on Community Standards as a guide to help define acceptable behavior on issues related to University and residential property or resident behavior.

Residents who violate Community Standards or other policies may be held accountable for their behavior, through the Student Code of Conduct and/or these Community Standards. Community Standards for prohibited conduct have been established relative to Fire Safety, Health and Safety, Building Security, Noise, Guests, Respect for Others, and Other Standards.
